BRUTAL MURDER COMMIT-TED NEAR THE CITY.

THE VICTIM AN INNOCENT OLD COLORED WOMAN.

She Fought Bravely for her Life but was Overpowered-No Clue to the Murderer.

A most brutal murder occurred three miles west of the city on Saturday night. By it Harriet Williams, an aged colored woman, lost her life. The particulars are sickening.

Early yesterday morning Barry Park a colored man who lived near the scene of the tragedy, went in search of his horse, which had wandered away during the night. His walk took him past the cabin which was occupied by Harriet Williams. When near the back door he heard groans from the inside and thinkng something might have befallen her be opened the door. There a terrible sight presented itself to him. On the floor at the opposite side of the room and lying in a pool of her own blood lay the woman. Two bloody axes were at her side. Frightened nearly out of his wits the fellow ran to some houses near by and quickly summoned the inmates. They nastened to the scene as soon as possible and entered the house. The surroundings told the story. Clad only in her night clothes and bleeding profusely from seven ghastly wounds the woman was lying on the floor with her head resting on the bottom step of the stairs that led to the upper story. Near by her lay two axes covered with blood, and scattered about the room were different articles of furni ture, wearing apparel and furniture that told plainer than words of the terrible struggle that had taken place during the

The woman was not yet dead, alhough unconscious. She was helped to the bed and every effort made to revive her, but it was vain and an hour later she died, without having uttered a word.

The victim of this brutal murder was chighly respected, industrious and savng woman. For three years she has ived entirely alone in the little house where she met her death Saturday night It is one of five cabins just off of the Hay wood road. The nearest house is eighty yards away and is occupied by Hames Henderson. Forty yards farther lives the family of Joseph Latimore and at a distance of 150 and 200 yards respectively live the families of Barry Barks and Mr. Avery Alexander.

For some time past the Williams wo man has worked at different places in the city during the week, spending only Sunday at her home. On Saturday she worked at the residence of Geo. W. Pack and in the evening left as usual to spend Sunday at her little cabin. When about a half mile distant she stopped at the store of Fletcher Reynolds to purchase some groceries and while there talked and joked good naturedly with the clerk. While paying for her goods a five dollar bill dropped to the floor and one of the bystanders picked it up. The clerk noticed the action and looking up be said: "What would you say Harriett, if I were to tell you that you had lost some

"I should tell you that you might keep all that you found," she replied. "I have not lost any money.

With that the man behind the counter handed the bill to her. She replaced it in her pocketbook and carelessly remarking that she had $5 more at home to go with it left the store.

After she had arrived at her home she vas seen several times. Twice she was about the yard for wood and water, and once she went to the Latimore house to get some milk for her tea. The last time she was seen was about eight o'clock.

No cries were heard from the hour during the night. No suspicious persons were seen about the neighborhood and the whole affair is shrouded in mys-

Coroner Hilliard summoned a jury, composed of J. W. Starnes, C. F. Penniman, J. M. Campbell, R. M. Deaver, M. H. Moneyhan, M. M. Ledford, and an inquest was held. The post mortem revealed three bloody and deep gashes made in the head, a gash at the shoulder that cut to the bone and one on either arm. A slight cut had been made on the ankle. The evidence was substantially as above, and from the appearance of the room it was evident that the struggle had been a long and desperate

The murder was doubtless committed by a would-be robber who knew that the woman had some money about her person and who secreted himself in the house until she had retired. The victim always slept with an axe at the head of her bed and one was standing at the wall near the rear door. When all was quiet in the Thrash. They will do a plumbing and night it is supposed that the murderer came from his hiding place, and while moving about the room aroused the woman. She jumped to her feet and Park gave a very pleasant entertainment grasped the weapon. He took up the other axe and the struggle began. The door at the front was backed as were the stairs and one of the axe belves showed two fresh cuts that told of a blow that had fallen short of its mark. The man was undoubtedly the stronger of the two and the victory was his. Leaving his victim on the floor he turned to the dress she had taken off CREATES many a new business;

And looked for the money. He cut the pocket open, took from it a bunch of keys and perhaps some money and fled. That he did not get all of her money, and perhaps none, was discovered late in the afternoon. Her pocket book containing afternoon to the returns it vields advertisers, its rates are the cheapers in the country. to have come from the head of the murdered woman. It is the opinion of Detective Deaver, however, that the man was wounded in the struggle. Sometime ago she told her friends that she had money in the bank. No bank book was found yesterday and it is thought that it was taken.

The murdered woman was about 53 years old and was, in old slavery days, the property of Senator Vance, and later was given to the Rev. R. N. Price She was known to the citizens of Asheville better by the name of Harriet Vance than by the name of Williams. The latter was the name of her husband who descried her twenty-three years ago.

The coroner's jury adjourned without agreeing upon a verdict and will hold an other meeting. The case is in the hands of the sheriff and the officers are doing heir best to run the murderer down, but as yet there is positively no clew. The funeral took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon from Wilson's Chapel, about a mile from the home of the dead woman.

GOSSIP OF THE DAY.

It has been suggested that the dark green standpipe that looms portentously into view from Beaumont would look much better if it had been creeted with a view to beauty as well as utility. The truth that there is in this suggestion is apparent to the dullest intellect. How nuch better the water would taste if the standpipe was to be decorated with makes of the time of Confucius and liz ords of the Paleozoic period, in a simple blending of ancient arts that would be simply irresistible! And what a grace the whole thing would give to the landscape if some very apropos subject like 'The Naiad's Bath" or "A Morning Dip' should be artistically emblazoned upon the present duliness of the tank! The scheme of having artistic standpipes and water towers is by no means new to the world, and some philanthropist might asily win name and fame for himself by resenting to Asheville the services of ome skillful fellow who should be emowered to make the dull unsightliness of the big water holder change to the bloom of the rose. The whole thing is full of a suggestive interest that has been presented to the Gossiper as a thing worthy of comment, and it is here presented to an anxious world with a few suggestions tacked on.

Now the New York Sun has gone into he business of giving to lovely woman ertain interesting points on how to nake herself even more attractive than she really is. First the Sun calls attenion to the lack of grace and steadiness in carriage which has become a real afflicion to the friends of the many young women who tumble and slide and trip along the streets while out walking. Next the Sun assails the lack of melodious voices among the American women, and complains of the "discords we hear so frequently; the flatness, the shrillness, the indistinctness, the nasal quality, the talse modulation, the distressing empha-

The Sun has reasons for asking for reorm in these directions, and it would also have excellent arguments in plenty to urge, if it cared to, against the same faults among mer. On some of the streets of Asheville it would be a very hard matter for any man to walk with the case and sureness of footing that ought to characterize the practiced pedestrian; but the argument would still hold that upon very few roads of any kind would the American man walk with a style that the American man walk with a style that would entitle him to praiseful attention.

Wills Bros. will be pleased to see anyone intending to build, at their office or one intending to build, at their office or asily take as many demerit marks as the sketches and perspectives of work done cleewhere by them and to consult about voices of the women. Indistinctness and lack of cultivation are two of the worst of the besetting sins, although the others are all there with them. Quite a rarity is the man who can spring gracefully to his feet at a dinner or upon a platform, and treat the assembled auditors to a neat, compact bundle of arguments and remarks uttered in a pleasant, easy, well modulated tone that falls upon the ear with the smooth pleasing of the mellow ute, or even with the harmonious disturbance of a bass drum when in the hands of an artist whose soulful, earnest. ple card free. thoughtful thumpings are full of careful anxiety to please and hopefulness that each distinct and separate biff shall have its due value in the homogeneous blowings and banging of the members of a big brass band. Quite a rarity, too, is the fellow who can give an order in a store or restaurant without having the clerk or waiter come back to ask him to try it ver and tell them once again what som particular thing was that he mumbled over without sufficient clearness to make imself understood.

Here's a sensible remark from a book on "Delicate Feasting" which has reently come from the Harpers' press: 'Kitchen' wine and 'kitchen' butter are fatal to good cookery." Mr. Theodor Child, who wrote the book, has arrived at the foundation of one of the vicious practices of certain housekeepers who think that it is all right to use any kind of eatable truck in cooking which they find to be too cheap, too rancid or too tasteless, or too miserable in appearance to place before their guests upon the table. It is probably not necessary to employ gilt-edged butter or the most delicate of wines and liqueurs in the preparation of some very dainty dishes; but the use of the white, lard-like grease and the ghastly liquids, costly at twenty-five cents a gallon, which the queens of the kitchen often make prominent ingredients of an otherwise pleasingly constructed dish, should be discouraged in every properly managed household. If man was made to deprive the hogs of their own best dishes turn him at the trough with the noble animals and give all an equal chance; but don't force them upon him at the table under easily penetrable disguises.
